Labor & Employment Law Webinar

Navigating Uncharted Waters:
Protection of Confidential Information in a Mobile Society

Tuesday, June 8th

12:00 p.m. PDT/3:00 p.m. EDT

FREE! Labor & Employment Law Webinar

When your company's key sales manager fails to show up for work on Monday, and pops up on Tuesday at your biggest competitor, what happens to the bits and gigabytes of company data stored on his BlackBerry, or the personal laptop he regularly used to access the company system?

What rights does your company have if the employee downloaded confidential information to a USB flash drive, while still an employee, but claims that she has "misplaced" the drive?

How much data are your employees accessing by means of wireless devices and how vulnerable are the transmissions to interception?

Are your company's current confidential information management protocols and policies sufficient to address all potential sources of improper duplication, theft, or misuse?

This one hour webinar, organized by the International Society of Primerus Law Firms, addresses the new challenges that employers face in preserving and protecting trade secrets, proprietary customer lists, confidential pricing materials, and other sensitive company information as a result of the proliferation of mobile communications devices, wireless system access, compact data storage devices, and "telecommuting." Webinar participants will hear from three experienced labor and employment law attorneys on the following topics:

"Mutiny on the Bounty!" Can the things my employees do on their cell phones and other hardware hurt me? They can--seriously. Chris Osborn presents an overview of the expansive (and expanding) exposure that employers of all sizes face in the age of a more transient and less loyal workforce equipped with a wide array of mobile communications and data storage devices.

David Villadolid provides proactive suggestions for protection of valuable company information and prevention of employee theft or misuse (including sample contract language, employee handbook/policy manual provisions, and best practices for information and data management).
